

About Gobeshona

Gobeshona is a knowledge-sharing platform, initiated in January 2014. It aims to bring together the national and international Climate research community to encourage sharing and making climate change research in Bangladesh more effective.

Interested Institutions that conduct climate change research or those who implement research into use, are welcome to join this platform. Currently, more than 40 diverse organizations from across the globe, have collaborated to disseminate climate change-related literature, events, opportunities, and ongoing research in Bangladesh. We encourage online interaction between researchers, and other interested parties, to register to connect with others. Gobeshona platform seeks to address the quality of research being produced in Bangladesh by encouraging constructive discussion and feedback amongst researchers, making research more meaningful from the inception stage through to the completion stage, and resulting publications become effective for use in response to climatic impacts in Bangladesh.
